Catching a Glimpse of God's Glory Papa Bear Answers Little Cub's Questions about Angels

Everyone's favorite polar bear is back with the newest book in the best-selling God Gave Us series. The adorable Little Cub wanders her arctic neighborhood with Papa Bear as they discuss all the questions kids have about angels: what they do, how they look, why they're here, and how they help care for God's treasured cubs everywhere.

God Gave Us Angels (WaterBrook Press, 9/16/14) is perfect to read with kids three and up. Parents and kids will enjoy exploring the delightfully detailed world of snow-covered wonders, playful woodland creatures, Little Cub's winsome polar bear family, and the angels who protect them all. The story is one that is biblically sound but extends beyond denominational boundaries.

Papa Bear patiently answers his young cub's questions about the mysterious angels she has heard about from her bunny friends. "What do angels do all day?" Little Cub asks Papa. "Angels live to serve God. Whatever he wants them to do, they do," he explains. "And he loves us. So sometimes they bring us messages from him to us. Other times they guard us or even fight for us. And they're always worshiping God."

God Gave Us Angels is the latest release in the God Gave Us series, a collection that began in 2000 with God Gave Us You and has grown to include eight unique titles and several special editions, including a three-book treasury and board book editions for younger children. All combined the series has sold over two million copies, and fans can anticipate a new book, scheduled for release in 2015. The books are popular with mommy bloggers because of their kid-friendly explanation of the Christian faith and their charming illustrations!
