Tricia Goyer

Using her own experiences as a teen mother, and leader of today's generation, Tricia Goyer's vision is to be a voice of hope and possibility for teenage girls, pregnant teen girls, mothers and wives through her educational and inspirational speaking, workshops, books, and her weekly radio show Living Inspired. Her intention is to serve ordinary women by encouraging extraordinary things with God's help. Tricia expresses real life, real hope, for real women.

Tricia is the author of 25 books and has published over 400 articles for national publications such as Focus on the Family, MomSense and HomeLife Magazine. She won Historical Novel of the Year in 2005 and 2006 from American Christian Fiction Writers, and was honored with the Writer of the Year award from Mt. Hermon Writer's Conference in 2003. Tricia's book Life Interrupted was a finalist for the Gold Medallion Book Award in 2005, and her novel The Swiss Courier was a Christy Award nominee.

In her fiction novels, Tricia writes contemporary and historical stories that feature strong women overcoming great challenges. She recreates historic wartime eras with precise detail through perseverant and comprehensive research.

Tricia speaks to groups interested in these eras, with the intention of preserving and honoring the memory of the men and women who served. She also speaks and conducts workshops for teens around the nation, and offers programs to assist teens and teen moms. Tricia is a frequent workshop presenter at the MOPS (Mothers of Preschoolers) International Convention, and the founder of Hope Pregnancy Ministries in Northwestern Montana.

In 2010, she was selected as one of the Top 20 Moms To Follow on Twitter by SheKnows.com. Tricia also writes as the Little Rock Christian Fiction Examiner for Examiner.com and is on the blogging team at MomLifeToday.com.
